Cameron McDondle is well on his way to getting 2,000 rushing yards this season. In just five games, he's racked up 927 yards. It's possible he will hit 2,000 in just ten games, and that's when you don't take into account the fact that CSU-Pueblo is probably a safe bet to return to the playoffs this year. Add in 11 touchdowns behind a stellar offensive line that should keep him running hard all season, and you know McDondle should be a lock to make an NFL roster.
