NVWF Season Survey Outline

Survey objectives:

- Ascertain the views of the diverse membership body as best as possible in terms of age, experience, and location
- Determine the effectiveness of the NVWF to meet membership expectations
- Identify areas for improvement

For our survey, we received responses from 20% (and met our goal) out of the roughly 1550 families in the NVWF. Respondents appear to represent the membership population very well in terms of years of experience and win-loss ratios. We can evaluate trends, tendencies, and opinions with a confidence level of 95% and error margin of 5%. Questions were constructed so that they could easily be understood and quick to complete.

Margin of Error

- Margin of error tells you how much error surrounds a measure. It's a percentage that describes how much the opinions and behavior of the sample you survey is likely to deviate from the total population.
- The smaller the margin of error is, the closer you are to having the exact answer at a given confidence level.
- In general, the larger your sample size, the lower the margin of error. The closer your sample is in size to your population, the more representative your results are likely to be.
- For example, let's say we asked 400 people if they have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of something, and 55% say favorable. Using a 95% confidence level and $\pm 5\%$ margin of error, if we repeated this survey 100 times under the same conditions, 95 out of 100 times, the response would be somewhere between 50% and 60%.

Confidence Level

- A confidence level tells you how reliable a measure is. Common standards used by researchers are 90%, 95%, and 99%.
- A 95% confidence level means if the same survey were to be repeated 100 times under the same conditions, 95 times out of 100 the measure would lie somewhere within the margin of error.
- When calculating your sample size, you'll use the z-score for your confidence level. The z-score is the number of standard deviations a given proportion is away from the mean.
 - 90% ~ z-score of 1.65
 - 95% ~ z-score of 1.96
 - 99% ~ z-score of 2.58
